Defining Key Terms

Key terms

Affordable Housing

In general, affordable housing is when an individual or family pays no more than 30 percent of income on housing costs, including utilities (as defined by HUD).

Public Housing

Public housing was established to provide decent and safe rental housing for eligible low-income families, older adults, and persons with disabilities. It is subsidized through the federal government and managed by local housing authorities.

Workforce Housing

While no common standard exists, workforce housing typically refers to providing homes for middle-income service workers, such as police officers, teachers and nurses, in close proximity to their jobs, who may not qualify for housing subsidies.

Attainable Housing

Sometimes used as a euphemism for affordable housing, the term does not have a set definition, but is often used to describe housing that is offered at a price that does not exceed 30% of a household's monthly income. Attainability can refer to housing units across a variety of incomes.

Below Market Rate (BMR) Housing

Generally used to describe when a housing unit – either an apartment or a single-family house – is made available to those earning low or moderate incomes. BMR housing can include both rental and homeownership units.

Mixed-Income Housing

A mixed-income housing development can be defined as a development that is comprised of housing units with differing levels of affordability, typically with some market-rate housing and some housing that is available to low-income occupants below market-rate.

Low-Income

Generally used to describe a household that earns less than 80 percent of the area median income (AMI).

Cost Burdened

A household, at any income level, paying more than 30 percent of their monthly income on housing costs.

Housing Insecure

Low-income households paying 50 percent or more of their income on housing costs or experiencing homelessness
